Adamson Industries Corp. Adds Sentinel™ Rear Safety Lighting System to its Portfolio of Lighting Equipment for Law Enforcement Vehicles

Haverhill, MA -- December 3, 2007 – Adamson Industries Corp™, a leading provider of law enforcement vehicle equipment and upfit services, today expands its product line with the Sentinel, a rear safety lighting system for police vehicles. The Sentinel improves officer safety by illuminating the rear of the vehicle when the trunk lid is raised and blocking the lightbar.

The Sentinel employs a series of rear-facing, high output warning LED lights that shine downward to illuminate the inside of the trunk and the rear of the vehicle. It includes two high power LED3 Mini Lights with 16 flash patterns, and a super bright LED3 area light that illuminates the trunk, making it easier to find items.

“We are always looking for ways to improve officer safety through new innovations in technology and equipment,” stated Steve Contarino, CEO, Adamson Industries Corp. “The Sentinel is designed to increase the visibility of a police car that has its trunk open. If a lightbar is blocked from view, it’s a danger to all motorists in that area. The Sentinel addresses that problem by keeping the rear-facing car lights in view.”
